Legal basis

The EDC processes personal information derived from the company's daily activities based on a legitimate interest in providing products or services that are relevant to you, and either assist or complement existing solutions.

EDC can process data:

- To complement marketing activities, personalize and measure results
- To personalize and enhance the user experience on the website
- To answer different inquiries
- To create promotional material such as invitations, reminders and newsletters

If the EDC provides a service to you or your company, then the processing of personal data and therefore the sharing of personal data with us will also take place.

We process customer data for the preparation of contracts, proposals, and implementation. Subsequently, we process personal information, which includes the names, contact details, and posts of the company representatives.

If there is no contract, we will only store the personal data for statistical purposes for a limited period of time. The EDC has a legitimate interest in sending marketing communications to its partners and customers in order to maintain a business relationship with them.

To maintain sales contacts, we use a client management system that ensures data security. Access to the database is restricted to the employees of the company.
