

ERKI PÄRNOJA

ERKI PÄRNOJA

Estonian songwriter and multi instrumentalist Erki Pärnoja heads for the hills with his new album and same-titled live band "Efterglow". Well known for his work as guitarist in the Estonian art-pop group "Ewert and The Two Dragons" he now reveals a diverse and more alternative side of himself as a frontman and songwriter.

Ethereal grieving synthesizer sounds that blend with a distinctive cutting guitar sound, drowned in shimmering reverb - all this forms a musical genre which is best described as a cinematographic journey, a complex affair between dream-pop and groovy guitar rock from the 70s.

Acoustic, synthetic and mystical. His unique Nordic touch, impressionist guitar riffs, film like soundscape and high instrumental skills of the whole band brought him the Artist Award of this years Tallinn Music Week. The short film for the title track of Pärnoja's new album 'Efterglow' was awarded for the best music video of the last 5 years at the Estonian Music Video Awards.

skilled musicians and nice tunes - very entertaining niche

"Loved the performance! The new album is really strong and would appeal globally."

“There is a good reason for such a crowd, mind, as the band are ace. Fans of Felt guitarist Maurice Deebank should check out the mercurial guitar lines that ripple across the surface of Pärnoja’s sound. The band have got something of Jaakko Kalevi’s muse, too. Trippy and blessed with a light hand on the tiller, it’s great pop”
